

Environmental policy

Byggmax sells building material via proprietary stores and the Internet. Through active environmental work, we shall strive for a sustainable, social development for future generations.

We impact the environment primarily through:

- transportation of products from manufacturers to stores or warehouses and from stores to customers
- products containing substances that impact the environment and product packaging
- printing and distribution of brochures
- energy consumption in the operation

We shall actively strive to continuously reduce our direct and indirect environmental impact, while supporting other operational goals. We shall consider the environment in all decisions and at all levels of the operation and we shall comply with applicable rules and other environmental requirements.

The environmental effort is based on a lifecycle perspective, meaning we consider the environmental impact throughout the product's entire value chain or process. Consequently, we shall strive to:

- maintain a continuous dialog in environmental issues with our suppliers and contractors, and impose relevant demands
- increase our employees' knowledge of environmental issues and encourage participation in environmental work
- increase the portion of environment-friendly products and improve environment-related information to customers.

The environmental effort at Byggmax utilizes the following documents and processes:

- Environmental policy: sets the focus for the environmental effort and defines the areas that must be prioritized
- Environmental goals and measures: set overall goals for prioritized areas, break down the overall goals by area, state measures and specify the employee responsible
- Environment report: measures the status and development per area annually, in the form of measures implemented and quantity dimensions. The latter when practically feasible

Our objective is to improve each year in the following areas, compared to the preceding year.
